THE REWARD OF BRAVERY.

IN COMMON COUNCIL, DEC. 3.

The following letter from his honor the Mayor to Commodore Perry, communicating the Resolutions of the Common Council on the subject of the Victory of Lake Erie and the Commodore's reply were read, and resolved, That the same be entered at length on the minutes of the Common Council, and published in the Gazettes of this city. By order of the Common Council

J. MORTON.

NEW-YORK, October 10th 1813.

SIR—It is with peculiar pleasure that I transmit to you the enclosed Resolutions of the Common Council of this city, expressive of their high sense of the glorious triumph of the American squadron under your command—an event without parallel in the annals of our country, which gives you distinguished rank among the celebrated men that reflect lustre upon the American name, and which has dispensed the blessings of security and tranquility to a most important and extensive portion of the United States.

I have the honor to be, with great respect, your obedient humble servant,

DE WITT CLINTON.

Commodore PERRY, Newport.

NEWPORT, Nov 29, 1813.

SIR—The distinguished honor conferred on me by the Common Council of the city of New-York, in their approbation of my conduct on the 10th of September, calls forth the warmest sensibilities of gratitude; to perform, to the best of my ability, this duty I owe my country, shall ever be my highest gratification. The request to sit for my portrait, "to be placed in the Gallery of Portraits of the Common Council," is too high an honor not to be readily complied with.

I beg, sir, that you will accept my thanks for the very flattering manner in which you have communicated to me [illegible]

[illegible] Gen. Cass, [illegible] Gen. Hull, [illegible] Col. Miller, [illegible] Col. Findlay, [illegible] Col. Richard Boyd [illegible] Gen. Cass

[illegible] in this case of change, the happiness of his people the benefits of peace, and being alive to every thing which is honorable to himself, and to the character of his people, he is happy to [illegible] all other intermediate negotiations, and [illegible] in this part he adopted, [illegible] his dignity to relinquish so necessary an object, and the hope he loved still [illegible] that his alliance with France, by [illegible] what the most certain means of [illegible] prudent councils heartened to, would place bounds to inevitable evils, and save the cause of the repose of [illegible] to Europe.

"Unfortunately, it has not thus happened; neither the brilliant successes of 1805, nor the unexampled misfortunes which marked the conclusion of it, were able to bring back into the councils of the French Government that spirit of moderation which would have saved the first to advantage, and diminished the effect of the latter. His Majesty did not, this time, on that account take advantage of the moment, when both parties, reciprocally exhausted, had suspended the active operations of war, to offer to the belligerent Powers pacific sentiments, which he still hoped to see received, on either part, with that sincerity which had dictated them. Persuaded, nevertheless, that he would only be able to make them be listened to by supporting them with forces, which would promise to the party, with whom he identified his views and principles, the chance of his active co-operation to turn among the great contest. In offering his mediation to the Powers, he determined upon the effort most faithful to his heart—an appeal to the courage and patriotism of his people. The Congress accepted by both parties, assembled in the midst of military preparations, which the suspension of negotiations would have rendered useless, were the Emperor's wishes fulfilled; but would, in a [illegible] case, [illegible] by new efforts of that public zeal which his Majesty preferred obtaining without effusion of blood.

"By detaining from the confidence placed in his Imperial Majesty, the consent to the prolongation of the Armistice which France judged necessary for the negotiations, the Emperor acquired, with the proof of their pacific views, that of the moderation of their principles, and of their intentions. In them he acknowledged his own; and since that moment persuaded himself that it would be from their side he would meet with sincere dispositions to concur in the re-establishment of a solid and durable peace. France, far from manifesting malignant intentions, gave but general assurances, too frequently contradicted by public declarations, which gave no hope that she would make those sacrifices for peace that would be sufficient to bring it back to Europe. The proceedings of the Congress could leave no doubt in this respect; the delay in the arriving of the French Plenipotentiaries, under pretexts which the great end of its assembling ought to have rendered nugatory. The insufficiency of their instructions upon objects of form, which caused an irreparable loss of time, when a few days only sufficed for the most important of negotiations—all these circumstances united, have clearly demonstrated, that a peace, such as Austria and the allied Sovereigns desired, was foreign to the wishes of France; and that having accepted, for form's sake, and to prove not to be opposed to the repose of the [illegible] of the war, he [illegible] for a negotiation, the whole object of which [illegible] Austria from [illegible] already pronounced [illegible] before Vienna, fell [illegible] taken for the basis of peace, and the happiness of the world.

"Austria seems not to [illegible] this; the [illegible] of [illegible] Austrian [illegible] Emperor [illegible] Vienna [illegible] this capital [illegible] Austrian [illegible] Austria [illegible] Austrian [illegible] Austrian [illegible] Austrian DOMESTIC ROVING AND SPINNING MACHINE.

THE subscribers have purchased the right of building, vending, and using the above Machine, in the towns of Newport and Bristol.—In most important advantages and economy, it will stand in a very high [illegible]

First.—It puts in the progress of roving and spinning, the Mules and other cotton the same manner, with great economy, and remarkable facility.

Second.—It will spin the common wool of sheep, from the coarse to the fine, with [illegible] and [illegible] to the common wheel; and equally increased quantity.

Third.—It will spin cotton, when spun properly combed, as fine and even as in the common wheel; and equally increased quantity.

Fourth.—It is very convenient for roving and twisting threads, cotton or yarn, of all descriptions, with astonishing expedition.

Fifth.—Its operation is not half so laborious as the Mule Jenny, and it is only managed by girls or children, with immense profit.

Sixth.—It will produce a saving, over the common wheel, of from 20 to 30 dollars, in the manufacture of every hundred yards of cloth.

Seventh.—It surpasses the great object of the two English machines, as it performs the same operations of the Mule and Jenny.

Let these facts be duly considered, and the old and plainest minds, together with the unlearning of that, [illegible] and the economy of wood and wages, which the machine will perform in the service of domestic life, in the manufacture of cotton, and the fine and coarse wool of sheep, and the fine and [illegible] in preserving the [illegible] fine and [illegible] wool—it will then give a powerful spring to enterprise, and [illegible] the [illegible] of the country, to the [illegible] and comfort of industry.—As each [illegible] of machinery, as each 20 or 30 spindles in one [illegible] will require [illegible] to attend to it, and [illegible] girls from 10 to 15 years of age.

It may be necessary to state some of the great [illegible] which are to be obtained with this machine, which are [illegible] to be obtained with any other machine now in use.—Less [illegible] to the pound of cotton or wool.—Less [illegible] to the spindle.—Less [illegible] to the [illegible] of yarn.—Less [illegible] to the [illegible] of cloth.—Less [illegible] to the [illegible] of cloth.—Less [illegible] to the [illegible] of cloth
